

Mental illness can affect anyone

Partners in Recovery may be able to help

Partners in Recovery (PIR) is a new mental health program for people who have a serious mental illness and many different needs, and have difficulty getting the help they need.

What problems can we help with?

People with serious mental illness can have problems with housing, employment, financial support, drugs and alcohol and their physical health.

How we help

We work with people with a mental illness, and their families, to identify their needs and to get the right services and support for their recovery.

Who can get help from Partners in Recovery?

Contact us to see if you or your family member or friend are eligible. We will refer people who are not eligible to other suitable organisations for help. We also work with families and carers who often need help and support too.

Partners in Recovery is an initiative of the Australian Government.

For more information or to make a referral contact us at:

 1300 656 608

www.hunterpir.com.au

info@hunterpir.com.au

Telephone interpreters can be accessed through the Translating & Interpreting Service (TIS)

Phone  131 450

